

OPUS Virtual Graduate Seminars

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

This winter semester, OPUS Young Scholars Initiative on Populism, in conjunction with Team Populism, is organizing Virtual Graduate Seminars with an aim to bolster knowledge on the theoretical, empirical, and methodological underpinnings of contemporary populism and promote academic conversations in a constructive and collaborative environment. We invite submissions by young and emerging scholars of populism to be presented at our five meetings that will take place between October 2022 and February 2023.

We encourage submissions on research concerning, but not limited to: populism and democracy, populism and crises (i.e., populism and the COVID-19 pandemic), sources of populist support, populist communication, populist mobilization and performance, populist polarization, and future of populism.

What to Expect?

Over the course of five meetings, five young scholars will have the opportunity to get together with the OPUS members as well as senior scholars from Team Populism to share their works in progress and receive detailed feedback in a supportive and stimulating environment. Furthermore, they will be able to discuss and collaborate on some data collection, for instance with coding speeches of certain leaders/parties/countries, piloting a survey, or getting help with question translations.

We will have one presentation per session, which will start at 5 pm (CET / 11am EDT / 9am MDT). Contributors are invited to give a presentation of up to 20 minutes, followed by up to 40 minutes of Q&A and discussions. Contributors are also invited to submit a short article related to their presentation (~1000 words) for OPUS' monthly blog posts. Details about the blog posts will be communicated later.

The seminars will take place in the following dates:

October 11, 2022

November 15, 2022

December 13, 2022

January 17, 2023

February 14, 2023

Submissions:

To take part in this semester's OPUS Virtual Graduate Seminars, please email the following material in one PDF file to initiativeopus@gmail.com by – and no later than – 16 September 2022.

- An abstract of a proposed scientific paper (maximum 300 words)
- A short bio of the author(s) (maximum 200 words)
- Two preferred dates for presentation (in order of preference)

Partial or incomplete applications will not be processed. Late applications will not be accepted. Applicants will be informed about the outcome via email by 23 September 2022. All seminars will be conducted virtually.